Sioux Valley FFA Member's Infinite Potential Shines at National FFA Convention

Kiley Kaufman, State Secretary

Money for college... The chance to travel internationally... Real world job experience... From raising livestock to working at floral shops, South Dakota FFA members possess some truly impressive Supervised Agricultural Experiences. At the 83rd National FFA Convention, one South Dakota FFA member found out just how far his SAE could take him.

Ethan VanderWal, a senior at Sioux Valley High School, began his Supervised Agricultural Experience three years ago when he was looking to start saving money for college. Seeing a need in his area for custom round baling, Ethan procured a loan in order to purchase a round baler and to rent a tractor from his family's farm. Ethan says that his first year turned out to be much more successful than he anticipated, and he finished the year having baled over 3,500 bales. Ethan realized that baling had kept him busy throughout the summer, and he spent a great amount of time baling cornstalks in the fall; however, he did not stay very busy during the spring. This thought led Ethan to buy a land roller and a tractor of his own, both of which played an essential role in improving his SAE. The spring of 2010 began the third year of Ethan's SAE, and seeing the need to expand even more, he purchased another land roller in order to help him keep up with the wants and needs of his customers.

Ethan, in large part, credits the success he has had within his SAE to the help of his family. He acknowledges that his father played the largest role in helping him to begin his SAE, but says that his entire family has been extremely helpful in developing his business. At the 83rd National FFA Convention, Ethan placed first in the Agricultural Services proficiency area which awarded him with $1500. Additionally, because of his SAE and proficiency, Ethan was selected to travel to Costa Rica on an expense-paid trip provided by the National FFA Organization. This summer, Ethan will be spending ten days touring sites, such as a Starbucks coffee bean farm, a banana plantation, and the rainforest. One small plan to start saving money for college has given this Sioux Valley senior not only the means to make money, but also real world experience and an exciting opportunity for international travel. Congratulations Ethan! Thank you for sharing your infinite potential with South Dakota!

Past and Present State Officers Go Global

Brittany Gassman, State Vice President

Wouldn't it be wonderful if in the midst of a South Dakota winter, the temperatures would reach ninety degrees and the warm sun would shine upon the ground? For past state officer, Brady Duxbury and current state officers, Spencer Chase and Brittany Gassman, this dream became a reality when they ventured to the South American country of Argentina with seventy past and present State Officers from around the nation to participate in the International Leadership Seminar for State Officers. During this program, the officers were given the opportunity to travel around the country to learn about the agricultural industry of Argentina and discover the different farming practices being used by the producers of the area.

The tour began with a one day stay and orientation workshop in Miami, Florida. At the orientation, participants were given the opportunity to listen to comments provided by the sponsor of ILSSO, Bunge International, as well as discovered ways to break down the barrier between the two cultures and overcome American stereotypes. After a jam packed day of training, the seventy officers boarded the plane to fly into Buenos Aires, Argentina. From there, the group traveled to Pergamino to visit a family farm specializing in soybean, corn, and wheat production using a no till agriculture system. From the farm, the group then travelled to the manager's machine shed in town to explore some of the equipment utilized in Argentina, which is much similar to the equipment used in the United States.

From the machine shed, the group travelled on to Rosario, the second largest city in Argentina for a night stay. The next morning, the buses were loaded as officers made their way to Terminal Six, one of the largest ports in the world, to tour the Bunge processing plant. After the tour, the officers were given time to enjoy the beach before driving to a nearby town to prepare to visit with breeders of Polo Ponies and another small farming operation. The next few days of the trip were dedicated to exploring the culture of the Buenos Aires area. Beginning with a trip to a nearby ranch, the officers witnessed a live gaucho show and their first experience with the Argentine tango. From there, the officers made their way back to Buenos Aires to explore the city, starting with the downtown area and ending in the historical neighborhood of La Boca, the very place where the art of Tango was founded. The day concluded with a live Tango show at a nearby theater that had once served as a factory and was later converted.

From Buenos Aires, the group once again boarded a plane to take a short trip to the northern part of the country to explore the sub-tropical rainforest and visit Puerto Iguazú, large waterfalls that lie deep within the forest. After a visit to the falls, officers were given the opportunity to travel through the forest and receive their own personal tour of the land. From Puerto Iguazú, the officers board the plane for the day's travel back into the United States. After goodbyes were said and business cards exchanged. The South Dakota officers returned to the white, snow covered ground of the state with new information and an unforgettable experience that strongly impacted their understanding of global agriculture by exposing them to another culture and their techniques of feeding the people of their country.

Calling for Your Infinite Potential!

Attention: high school seniors and college freshman interested in serving the SD FFA as either a state officer or state student ambassador. State Officer interviews will be held Saturday, April 9th and continuing through the Evening Session on Monday, April 11th. A Nominating Committee will select the state officer team and a committee of district officers will interview the student ambassador candidates during convention. What do the duties of these two leadership positions require? These positions require candidates to be willing to serve the organization all year planning and implementing activities. Those selected must be committed to serving as a positive role model for the organization. Events throughout the year include Leadership Retreats, managing the Ag Learning Center at the State Fair, District Officer Training and Legislative Breakfast, service activities, trainings, chapter visits and numerous other responsibilities throughout the year. There are many hours put behind the scenes of these events at weekly office days to prepare for these events, to ensure members have opportunities for growth and success.

For more information and details about these positions and for a copy of the applications, log onto <http://aged.sdstate.edu> and click on the "Forms/Applications" tab. These must be postmarked to Brookings by March 12.

District Officers Uncover the Mystery of Teamwork

Brittany Gassman, State Vice President

Once again District FFA Officers joined together in Pierre to promote the FFA to the state political representatives and work together to discover the "Mystery of Teamwork". On January 18th and 19th, over forty District Officers from around the state met together in our state's capital for the annual District Officer Training and Legislative Breakfast. All state sponsorships listed are special projects of the South Dakota FFA Foundation.

The two-day festivities began in the State Capital Visitor Center with orientation and a brief training for the District Officers about what to expect at the upcoming Legislative Breakfast. After brushing up on some FFA and Agricultural Education facts, members were given the opportunity to tour the capital compliments of volunteer tour guides from the Pierre Area. The tour concluded with round table discussion with various community members and government leaders relaying information on numerous topics ranging from the lobbying process, Perkins funding, and agricultural education to current agricultural issues, Career and Technical Education programs, and the paging process. District 7 Officer, Collin Christiansen, comments, "My favorite part of DOT was the circle discussions because I was able to talk with knowledgeable people about current topics with new facts."

The District Officers were able to use the new facts from the round table discussions the next morning at the annual FFA Legislative Breakfast. The Legislative Breakfast gives the District and State Officers an opportunity to relay the message of FFA and the importance of Agricultural Education to the people who lead our state. After the breakfast, the District Officers were launched into more training where they worked together to build a tower using spaghetti noodles and marshmallows, develop their very own team mascot, communicate without using the word "I" and design an image for the ideal District Officer.

Kelli Garry, a District 2 Officer stated, "My favorites were "The I's Have It," picking a mascot, and building the structures. I never realized how many times I said 'I' before I said it 17 times in 2 minutes! It helped me understand focusing conversation on something interesting to the other person. The structures were fun because we had to work together as a team and really got to express our creativity!"

The long car rides to and from Pierre, the two days of District Officer Training, and the time spent with the State Legislatures at the Legislative Breakfast provided the South Dakota District Officers the chance to spread the word about FFA and Agricultural Education, bond as a team, and solve the "Mystery of Teamwork."

FFA Members Feed the Hungry

Maria Rausch, State President

Have you ever been hungry? How about REALLY hungry from not getting a good meal in weeks or months? This year at state convention, there will be an opportunity to help those who do experience that daily. At this year's convention, the South Dakota FFA will be partnering with "Kids Against Hunger," a non-profit organization whose one mission is to provide nutritious food to impoverished children all around the world. On Monday of convention, members will be able to give their time and pack these food items for the less fortunate children all around the world. FFA's goal is to put together 90,000 packets of food. Each package contains six servings, and each bag can be prepared in less than 20 minutes by adding the contents to boiling water.

The program all began when Richard Proudfit was on a mission trip to Honduras. He was moved by the starvation he saw among children. "It wasn't long until I began to see the children – literally dying around us. One mother came to me crying, carrying her nearly dead child, pleading for help. That was when the Lord broke my heart and brought me to my knees and I knew I had to come back and do something about it," said Richard Proudfit. Due to the help and donations from many generous people, they are able to do this through feeding programs, orphanages, schools, and clinics. 100% of Kids Against Hunger food is packaged by volunteers from schools, youth groups, church groups, senior centers, and individual volunteers. Did you know that 23 cents feeds one child for a day? South Dakota FFA, this is how we can give back! Let's all utilize our free time during Convention and help the children of the world who don't have enough to eat.

Monsanto Growing Local Communities

Hannah Johnson, State Sentinel

This past year Monsanto gave America's farmers an opportunity to nominate a local non-profit organization to win $2,500 for use within their local communities. These funds help chapters give back to members in their community. In South Dakota the following five FFA Chapters received $2,500 from Monsanto: Arlington, Chester, Clark, Deubrook, McCook Central.

The Arlington FFA Chapter plans to create landscaping projects at the local park and fix a "Buckle Up" safety sign to put back on the highway to give drivers a friendly reminder. The Clark FFA chapter is planning to use the funds for Washington Leadership Conference scholarships for several chapter members and they are also plan to purchase and install a new flag pole at the front entrance of the elementary school. The Deubrook FFA chapter plans on using the funds for scholarships to an FFA member that has been involved for the past three years and will attend an in-state college for an agricultural related field. The McCook Central FFA chapter is planning a community garden in Salem and possibly Spencer. If they get the garden going they will use the funds to buy a tiller and hope to be able to build a small storage shed to place their gardening tools. Thanks to the support of Monsanto, FFA members are being given the opportunity to commit even more time to community service.

South Dakota FFA Chapters Prepare for 2011 FFA Week

Spencer Chase, State Treasurer

This February, FFA chapters across the country will celebrate the most wonderful time of the year, FFA week! FFA chapters have been partaking in this event since its inception in 1947. FFA week was originally placed in the month of February because it is the same month of George Washington's birthday. Ever since, FFA week has always been held so that the birthday of our first president is sometime during the week. For instance, George Washington's birthday is February 22nd, the Tuesday of the 2011 FFA week and the day after Presidents day.

FFA chapters in the state are also getting in the spirit of FFA week! Several schools are planning on wearing official dress to school, others are talking about wearing their chapter T-shirts and sweatshirts to school. Many chapters also celebrate FFA week by having breakfasts for their teachers and sponsors. There are also several chapters that hold animal nurseries to educate younger students about the importance of agriculture. The FFA week activities are as unique and diverse as the chapters and members themselves!

For more information and FFA week resources including a press release and chapter activity ideas, go to the SD FFA Website and click on "Events" or go to ffa.org/events/ffaweek.
